

14085 - Lok BlackBlade™ (S) Ash Wood

A handmade, robust full tang wilderness knife made for the expedition. The combination of the full-bodied handle made of carefully selected bright ash wood from European FSC® certified forests together with the 3.2 mm thick, black blade made of recycled Swedish stainless steel makes the knife ready for heavy-duty work in the wilderness. The spine of the blade is also compatible with a fire starter, which means that you always have the heat from the campfire close at hand.

The strong handle made of unique ash wood has a finger guard, a functional grip heel, and a 3.2 mm thick, black knife blade made of recycled Swedish stainless steel. Which together with a specially designed blade curvature, provides both strength and stability in every cut. Developed for demanding challenges, the knife has exemplary features for those who need a safe and robust tool. The black PC-coating creates a balanced contrast between the bright ash wood and the shiny edge of the blade. The vegetable tanned leather sheath has a belt loop and protects the sharp edge from surfaces that can make the knife dull. Lok is also compatible with the accessory Dangler 10 with Button, which allows you to extend the distance between the knife sheath and the belt.
